To Whom It May Concern:

Aurora Contractors, Inc. served as General Contractor for several of our construction projects on Long Island. To date, they have completed 450,000 square feet of building for BJ's, including demolition, renovation and new construction. Of the 450,000 square feet that Aurora constructed, approximately 30,000 square feet was insulated panel cold storage, used for meat, produce and frozen foods departments, both on the sales floors and preparation rooms.

Each of the projects involved a tremendous amount of coordination, as they were either built in an existing, operational mall or were major renovations in an existing store that had to remain open while the work was ongoing. Aurora's project teams are proficient at communicating and coordinating with ownership, neighboring tenants and all trade subcontractors, in order to ensure that their projects run smoothly.

I have worked closely with many of Aurora's employees - from Frank Vero, Sr. and Frank Vero, Jr., Aurora's president and vice-president - to project managers and superintendents. All are extremely knowledgeable and possess excellent communication and project management skills. Unlike the larger construction companies, where ownership is removed from the day-to-day workings of the company, Aurora's executives take a personal interest in each and every project that they manage. You can be assured that your project will receive the undivided attention of everyone on the Aurora Project Team.

Aurora Contractors' management and employees have an in depth knowledge of the local labor market, unions, municipal agencies and officials. They are extremely adept at navigating through the red tape that can be encountered when constructing a building.

I highly recommend Aurora Contractors for your construction needs.

Very truly yours,
